THE NEW UNIVERSITY.

The past session of the University of Virginia, under the chairmanship of Dr. P. B. Barringer, was one of the most prosperous it has ever had. The year was characterized by unexampled activity in all departments. If we count the summer students in law and the sciences a total of about 600 students attended the courses of the University in '96'97, of whom about 250 were academic, 146 were medi cal and 119 were regularly matriculated law students. The graduates in this large number were hopefully numerous. About 50 medical students received the well-earned degree of M. D.; 19 law students recaived the degree of B. C.; 10 academics received the M. A. degree; 17 academics received the B. A. degree; 4 bachelors of science were graduated from the engineering department, and one advanced student received the degree of doctor of philosophy. New reg ulations have been adopted by the fac ulty for this crowning honor of the uni versity, increasing the number of sub jects studied to three, setting a mini-mum time limit of three years in which B. A. may complete his studies for the legree, and requiring of all cardidates reading knowledge of French and German.

There were over 70 titled graduates of this and other institutions at the university last session, 30 of whom pur--ued post graduate courses in its aca demic lecture rooms and laboratories while the remainder distributied themselves among the law and medical courses. This large mass of serious minded youth pursuing pedagogical and professional work in the walls of the university at once defines the unique position of Jefferson's creation in the South as "the educator of its educators." Its unrivaled facilities for work of all descriptions, its great physical and mechanical laboratories now nearly ready at the lower en tof the historic lawn, its magnificent observatory on Mt. Jefferson, its matchless rotunda now thrown into one majestic room for the reception of the 20,000 volumes recently donated by enthusiastic alumni and friends (ver and above the 17,000 volumes saved from the fire). All these material agencies, combined with intellectual resources of the most stimulating kind, make of the University in its environment of enchanting scenery an ideal spot for the student and scholar, a spot haunted by revered and beautiful associations, the birthplace since 1825 of innumerable ambitions, the Mecca of thousands of young men whose children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren return again and again to drink of the fountain which the great mother of Common wealths has so lavishly provided in the lovely mountains of Virginia.

Starting in 1825 with a faculty of 7 men and about 100 students, the University has more than quintupled these figures and has expanded into a faculty of about 50 professors and instructors, and an annual attendance of virtually 600 students. Numerous scholarships and fellowships have been founded to attract the aspiring undergraduate. An admirable most court supplemented by stimulating prizes with hundreds of dollars increases the usefulness of the famous Law School, which for 28 years past has additionally attracted hundreds of summer law students (nearly a thousand having actually attended

The expansion of the medical course to three sessions of nine months each puts this widely-known school, already celebrated for the success of the graduates in competitive examination, abreast of the great schools of the American Association of Medical Coi-

The new schools of mathematics, modern languages and English promise remarkably well under their reorgar. iz tions, and are abundantly attended. The literary life of the University has latterly assume i new vigor and vitality under impulses received through a more enlightened encouragement on the side of the faculty. The triumphs of the University teams in the athletic field North and South call renewed at tention to the admirable Fayerweather gymnasium and the accomplished di-rector, who not only turns out these merely ornamental results, but suc-ceeds in interesting nearly 90 per cent. of the students in some form of health-olis of nearly 800 souls (including all the attaches of the university gathered within the picturesque and venerable arcades, "rows," "ronges," and lawns) the christian life has not been forgotten and an excellent system of Sunday lectureships voluntarily maintained by students and professors made Sunday last year a day of welcome spiritual refreshment to many souls. Thirty five clergymen, distinguished in their several denominations for eloquence and ability, preached twice on Sunday in the chapel to the whole student body and gave them rare opportunities of hearing such pulpit orators as Bishop Randolph, Dr. Hoge, President Waterhouse, President Whitman, Dr. Willett,

Painter, of Roanoke College; Rev. W. W. Moore, of Hampden-Sidney; Rev. Professor Grammer, Dr. Carmichael,

Dr. KeKim, &c. In a hive of the higher learning like the University of Virginia the life is necessarily busy, bustling, concentrate!, but amusement is by no means crowd ed ou; a charming social activity permeates every channel of these ancient cloisters; the students come in delightful social contact with the dons and dignitaries of the institution, and a mild paternal supervision reduces the fric-tion between governing body and ma-

One word about the expenses of a university course. An erroneous im pression prevails in the remoter parts of the State and in the South that the University of Virginia is "a rich man's the necessary expenses of a student at this famous "pet of Jefferson," remembering always that the education offered and given is the highest and best in the entire South, contributed by a group of famous spec aiists amid laudscape surroundings of exquisite beauty, at a spot second only to Mt. Vernon in noble historic associations.

1 A Virginia student (there were 283 of these at Charlottesville last year) may rid himself altogether of tuition fees by standing exeminations in Latin, Greek, mathematics and English.

2. The necessary expenses of an academic student other than a Virginian, including fees, tuition and living, are less than $300 per annum, excellent board being obtainable at the University mess for $11 a month.

3 The necessary expenses of a medical student at the University are, for the first year, $350, for the second year $330. for the third year $290. These moderate sums include a reasonable allowance for books and instruments, beside fees, juition and board at a school which for more than seventy years has stood at the head of medical education in the South.

4. The necessary expenses of a law student at the University are $310, in a school which has filled the South and North with distinguished jurists, gov-ernors, congressmen, members of State legislatures and law professors; has educated Cabinet ministers and ambassa-dors and has sent forth hundreds of experts in the science of jurisprudence.

The prestige of the institution for high scholarship, sound educational methods, rigorous examinations, uniform success for her graduates wherever they come in competition with the graduates of other Southern institutions, and accomplished and capable reaching is so great that her diploma is instantly recognized as truly a letter of recom mendation to any one possessing it for any walk or vocation of life.

Education at such an institution so great in prestige, so abundant in oppor tunities of all kinds, the intellectual centre of a great commonwealth which has impressed its ideas on the whole country, the beloved and chosen gathering place of the elite of the South for nearly a hundred years, cannot be consi lered dear at any price, and must, in view of the rare and numerous advantages offered by the university, be regarded, at the ra erabove indicated, as remarkably cheap in the end. Here, from year to year, representatives of the leading families of the South gather and study in a region beautifully pictur esque, varied by mountain and valley. near the homes of Jefferson and Madi son, Monroe and Wirt, Cabell and George Rogers Clarke; and here in the 500 acres of lonely woodland belonging to it, the new university with its grand quadrangle of new Greek buildings, its new laboratories and museums, its new and nobler rotunda flanked by graceful balustraded terraces, its new life and larger facilities, is rising and assuming grandiose proportions hardly imagined even by its illustrious founder.

A Valuable Prescription.

Editor Morrison of the Worthington, Ind., "Sun," writes: "You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bit-ters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for Constipation and Sick Headache, and as a general s stem topic it has no qual." Mrs. Annie Stehle, 2025 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, was all run down, could not eat nor digest food, had a backache which never left her and felt tired and weary, but six bot-tles of Electric Bitters restored her health and renewed her strength.
